Referring to telephone messages to Rofrano in the Municipal Building from the home of Rox Cornell, in New Albert Control of the Rox Cornell, in New Albert Control of the Rox Cornell of the home of Rox Cornell, in New A Utrecht Avenue, Brooklyn, where, it is El Monte-Galvest alleged, the plot was hatched, La Salle

Rox called the Municipal Building "Rox called the Municipal Building and said: 'Well, we've got this fellow Montimagno over here and we got him stiffened up.' He said to the man on the other end of the wire: 'Bring over the money—we need it. This is our chance to get "The Horse" (Giamari) out of the way.'

the way."
"After talking with Rofrano over the telephone," continued La Salle, "Rox told Frank Fennimore Rofrano said the only way to ket any money was to put Giamari's lights out. 'Once "The Horse" is dead we can get all the money we want, he said."

Phone Talks Discussed

La Salle explained sometimes Mike Campbell answered the telephone in Rofrano's office. Martin W. Littleton, counsel for the defendant, objected to the testimony about conversations with Rofrano on the ground that there was no proof that the ex-city official was at the other end of the wire. The prosecution will produce telephone slips to prove the calls were made as La Salle says.

Rofrane discussed the killing of "The Horse" with Cornell and Fennimore in the Home Rule Democratic Club, in Madison Street, on several occasions before Mayor Mitchel's election, in 1915, and later, in 1914, La Salle testified.

"Once, when Rofrano was alone with me in his private office in the clubhouse, he says: 'What's the matter with Rox and Fennimore? They've been after "The Horse" and they can't get him. I've been giving Rox $50 a week for a year and a half, "La Salle swore. During La Salle's cross-examination Mr. Littleton turned upon him, asking if he had taken any cocaine during the afternoon recess. La Salle insisted he had not and Justice Weeks, who regarded Mr. Littleton's question as a reflection on the convict's guard, took La Salle to his chambers in the presence of Mr. Littleton and had him searched, but no narcotic was found on him. After that Mr. Littleton vainly strove to wring an admission from La Salle that he was an habitual user

Testimony in support of the theory of the defence that Giamari was shot to please Fennimore, one of his gambling rivals, was given late yesterday by La Salle after he admitted that since Al and John ("Buster") Giamari, brothers of the murdered man, were acquitted of a murder charge in 1914. Cornell and Fennimore were obliged to stay in Brooklyn.

Cedits—Letropol School And 12 00 M Bit by bit La Salle unwillingly admitted that Fennimore ran a gambling house at $3 Madison Street before "The Horse" was stabbed in December, 1913. There was a rival house at 41 Oliver Street, he added, but he said he didn't know "The Horse" ran it. He insisted that the feud between Giamari and Fennimore began before the election in 1913 and was caused when Fennimore and Roz Cornell joined Rofrano's Home Rule Club. "The Horse' promised if Rofrano would get the principal witness against Al and Buster' Giamari to change his story and acquit them he'd bring 150 members into the Home Rule Club." La Salle testified. "He didn't keep his word and Rofrano said to me and Fennimore and Cornell that 'The Horse' put one over on him and that Rox and Fennimore must get him. "Rofrano critteised Tom Foley so much that he said he could almost go out and get him himself if it wasn't that Foley was so old," the witness testified.

15 Jersey Dairymen Held

Newton, N. J., Oct. 12.—Fifteen dairy-men, members of the Dairymen's League, ware arrested to-day and held for further action by Justice Whitney. They are accused of being some of the pickets who last Saturday dumped the canscontaining milk belonging to Samuel L. McConnell, of Green Township, tied him to the bottom of his wagon and then lashed his horses after they had been turned homeward. McConnell was found by his wife after the horses had brought him home.
